More Than Meets The Eye: An Inspirational Novel Of History, Mystery & Romance (The Rewinding Time Series Book 5)

Synopsis

The delightfully satisfying conclusion to the Rewinding Time Series. Remodeling Professor Merrideth Randall's dream house is turning into a bigger project than she and Brett imagined. Even so, they take time out when Merri's father pleads for her to visit him in prison. When she boldly shares her new faith to the inmates and guards Brett proposes to her on the spot. Now, if only they can get the house finished it will be perfect for the wedding. The work would go faster if there weren't constant interruptions by people needing help. But Merri has a new policy of people before projects, which is why she agrees to temporarily "be a grandma-sit" to Josephine Sayers so she can stay in the home she loves "one of 156 Sears catalog houses built in Carlinville, Illinois in 1918. Merri uses her miraculous time-surfing software to meet Elizabeth Spaulding, the plucky lady on horseback who supervised the men constructing the houses. She's a strong woman of the new century, but all she really wants is a Sears home of her own "and for her husband to be worthy of her respect. After seeing Elizabeth's struggles unfold on her screen, Merrideth prays that she will have the grace to keep her marriage vows to Brett "in good times and bad. Customer Reviews

More Than Meets The Eye is the fifth and final book of the Rewinding Time series and once again readers are invited into the lives of Merredith Randall, Brett Garrison and their friends. Merredith's life has drastically changed. She has purchased the house she has longed for; she has finally accepted Jesus Christ as her Savior; and she now believes that the man she loves will finally feel free to love her back. Brett is a devout Christian but he had decided that they could only be friends because of her unbelief in God and her reluctance to live a Christian life. Now Merridith is confident that as soon as she can prove that her faith is real, they will marry. As she begins to make her dream house livable Merredith also agrees to grandma-sit an elderly lady so that she can remain in her beloved home that was built in 1918 as one of the Sears home. Merredith and Brett once again use the Beautiful Houses computer program to research this home and to return to another time period to witness history being made. This time it is 1918 and they can view the beginning of a subdivision of Sears Homes that were being built in Carlinville, Illinois. This subdivision would have 156 homes with 9 different house styles and what made them so unique was that the houses could be purchased from the Sears Catalog and they came in a kit. Nails, premarked and numbered boards, and all other building supplies were included and even trees were offered. To add interest and some controversy to this project, Merredith and Brett find that this massive project is being supervised by a woman and this was unheard of in 1918! I loved this plotline that Deborah Heal has chosen for the final book of this series.
